A SPECIAL to the Globe Democrat dated Sedalia, Mo., Feb. 2, says, "Dan K. Shields, the renown temperance orator, who indulged in a spree here Wednesday last delivered a lecture to a crowded house at the Congregational Church there on Saturday night, and was warmly received by the friends of the cause." Shields is well known in Keytesville having lectured here several years ago. He is a fine temperance orator, but does not possess the grit to put his precepts into continual practice, and sometimes gets into the gutter.

HENRY KROEGER shot and instantly killed Charles Knowlman at the Mound City Hotel in St. Louis on the 22d instant, under circumstances that look very much like murder, though Kroeger says the killing was accidental. Both parties were mere boys, aged about fifteen years. Kroeger says they were playing Buffalo Bill's Wild West when the tragedy occurred. The parents of both boys lived in the city and they had not long since endeavored to obtain money on a forged check. Failing in this they went East for awhile, and had just returned to the city.
